Category:Video game development software Category:Computer graphicsQ: I am confused about a function parameter of void _____, what does this mean Why can't I use this type void _____* to construct a pointer, void test(void* x) { (int)x=1234; } A: void * is not a real type; it is just an arbitrary pointer type. So: (int)x is illegal. The right way to do this would be to pass in a pointer to int, and then dereference that pointer: void test(int *x) { *x = 1234; } int main() { int i = 42; test(&i); } Note that you could define test with a different signature, such as void test(void * x), and you could cast the void * to int * if you want to do something more complicated. You are here 2015 Games It was a historic summer for the U.S. Cross Country program as five different U.S. athletes broke the course record at the 2015 IAAF World Cross Country Championships in Kampala, Uganda. When the 2015 IAAF World Cross Country Championships started, the U.S. women were leading the pack, with Bryshon Jacobs (Goshen, N.Y.), Susan Koppenburg (Hillsboro, Ore.), Caroline Rivera (Carlsbad, Calif.), Nell Kimelman (Oak Park, Ill.) and Lizzie Crocker (Louisville, Colo.) all standing atop the podium in Santa Rosa. The power of girls in sport has been central to the IAAF World Cross Country experience from the beginning. IAAF Secretary General and Womens' World Cross Country Champion believes that it's more important than ever to give young girls the opportunity to see women dominate at cross country. Katsuhiko Yamamoto was last year's IAAF World Cross Country Champion. But he didn't cross the finish line in Uganda until second place on Sunday. He crossed the line in first place on Saturday, but he had to wait to collect his medal. Bryshon Jacobs (Goshen,
