What can we learn from these organisms?
Aquarium Sim: See how a fish uses its body to find food, escape predators, or even have sex. 1) Explore the habitat: Find out what makes coral reefs different from rivers and ponds. 2) Study the behavior of the fish:

Watch how they hunt for food, how they mate, and how they fight for territory. 3) Apply your knowledge: Check your answers and see how much you know about fish! 4) Connect with the world: Become a fish and see a real-life coral reef environment from the eyes of a fish. libgdx Hi all i am working on a small game in libgdx. The thing is that i want to do a call in my database. This call is supposed to be up to date by a time. For example if my call returns a result this will return in 3 hours. I use a service class that returns me a message as a json string. I use this to load a set of buttons that when i press change the message. The problem that i have is that i want this ajax request to be called when the screen is launched, not to be changed by pressing a button. I have used a service that returns a message and the buttons are loaded from the service. But this service is up to date when the service is called. Thank you for your help. A:

For a web service you can use Netty to create the service that your game can call to get data.
