The authors of the groundbreaking exposé of the CIA's post-9/11 torture program "The Choice" aren't easy to find. But it turns out that they are part of a Los Angeles class of writers and filmmakers making a series of movies dealing with the aftermath of the 9/11 attacks. Told in alternating chapters, "The Choice" traces the CIA's years-long interrogation program, which involved using "any and all means" to force prisoners to reveal information. The movie is part of the class of projects known as Generation 9/11, a collection of documentaries and feature films produced by the Center for the Study of Genocide and Human Rights at the University of California, Los Angeles, and include three older siblings: "The Hunting Ground," "Standard Operating Procedure," and "Zero Days." A first-person account by a CIA officer and a declassified Pentagon report call into question the CIA's version of events. "The Choice" director Steve Grove and screenwriter Michael M. FoneTrans is a free application developed by Davlik Software Ltd that enables users to transfer photos, contacts, messages, books and playlists from your computer to your Apple iPhone, iPod or iPad or vice versa. The application allows users to create custom-made folders and transfer information to or from your device and as such can be integrated with Windows Explorer and can also act as a removable drive. The application's interface is very clean and its tab feature is an added advantage. FoneTrans Features: FoneTrans is a powerful application that provides users with effective tools to transfer and synchronise media content. The application can be used to connect to any iOS device that is either plugged into the Mac's USB port or through Wi-Fi. Using this application, a user can transfer or synchronise media content such as music, photos, videos, audiobooks, playlists, contacts and messages to an iOS device through a USB cable or wirelessly. A user can view, edit and add tags to all the media files in the device's library to make them searchable in iTunes. FoneTrans lets users transfer contacts, messages and files to and from their iOS device in the form of text files, notes, photos, videos and audios, and iTunes playlists. Users can add and remove any of these media files to and from their iOS device through the iTunes application. They can also export their media files in the form of iTunes playlists to their iOS device for easy playback in the device's native media player or further transfer to another device. FoneTrans helps users perform other tasks such as transferring playlists, creating custom folders, creating custom ringtones for contacts, taking a photo and calling the contacts with a customised message. FoneTrans Review In my opinion, FoneTrans is a good iTunes alternative. In other words, this app performs pretty much the same as iTunes by enabling users to transfer all sorts of media content such as contact, message, photo, video and more files as well as playlists to and from their iOS devices. The application is fairly easy to use and offers extensive media and device management. Abruptly, the images are gone. God help us if there's a Christmas party, or if there's snow. Or if we're simply heading into the seventh inning of the World Series. It's nearly impossible to reach this week's Cut for time. I have a data source that returns responses that only contain plain text. The data source returns several hundred response rows each time it is called. Because the number of returned rows is so large, it is important to only execute the request that is absolutely necessary to fetch the data. Currently I am fetching all data on each request, however I would like to write a specific command that will only do this for specific input arguments. Is there a way to skip responses that only contain plain text? A: You need to identify whether a column returns a valid value based on some criteria. Typically, you would define a data source and have a format customised for that data source (e.g. CSV for an import or XLS for an export). However, as you have shown that you do not want to import all the data into an SSAS cube, you can make use of the fact that SSAS uses the XSD document to describe the data schema. You can use the Power Query Editor to break apart the response into the parts which contain the data (e.g. with a regular expression) and then do what you need based on those. Alternatively, if you can accept having an MDX query, you can use something like this to add the column that you want to filter by (in this case, it would be the ResponseXML column) to a set - then you can create a new MDX query where all the rows where ResponseXML does not equal the new set are filtered out. Socially responsible investing Socially responsible investing (SRI) refers to financial investments that are directed to address social, environmental, and/or ethical issues. Such investments are commonly called 'green' investments because of the emphasis on environmental concerns.
