The Adobe Creative Cloud bundle of Photoshop, Illustrator, and other applications and services enables users to buy an annual subscription for access to the latest software and content. It's a convenient way to access the same software for one fee, but it's also a way that you can keep paying more for additional software. Image Manipulation with Photoshop Chapter 7 gives you all the info you need on working with layers, including the concept of using layers to manipulate images. Here, I demonstrate with basic tasks of resizing and rotating an image to show you how layers enable you to modify your image in different ways. Keep in mind that layers aren't the only way to create and manipulate an image. See Chapter 7 for an overview of layers and explore other features for working with your images, such as simple document organization, layer masking, and general photo editing functions. Resizing an image If your photo is too large for your main monitor, you can use Photoshop's Resize Image command to rescale the original image. The Resize command enables you to resize your image to a range of 1–20 percent, whereas Crop Image enables you to resize it proportionally. You can combine both of these commands for resizing your image in various ways (as shown in Figure 13-1). Image courtesy of Westin Resort, Singapore Figure 13-1: Resize or crop an image with Photoshop. The basic Resize command uses a default setting of 60 percent. I change the setting to 80 percent, so that the resized image measures 5.5 inches by 8 inches. However, you can resize a photo to one of eight sizes, ranging from 1 percent to 20 percent, or a fixed size of the current pixel, such as 4 inches by 6 inches. To resize an image, select the image that you want to resize and then choose Resize from the Crop screen or press the F5 key. Select from the drop-down list of preselected sizes or enter a percentage or pixel size. As shown in Figure 13-2, the top section of the Resize screen has a button for each of the preselected sizes. Alternatively, you can enter the exact size in inches or centimeters or pixels in the Ratio box. Association of obesity with primary and secondary haemostasis in patients with postmenopausal osteoporosis. The aim of this study was to investigate the association of obesity with primary and secondary haemostasis in postmenopausal osteoporosis. A total of 615 patients (mean age 68.5 years, range 50-86 years) were enrolled in this study. Fasting blood samples were taken and blood clotting parameters were measured with the use of a whole-blood-based assay (ROTEM® delta). We analysed the association of body mass index (BMI) with each blood-clotting parameter using regression analysis adjusted for age, the presence or absence of diabetes, and use of oral anticoagulants. For all patients, using BMI of ≥25 kg/m2 and normal weight as the reference value, median ROTEM®-D values for maximum clot formation time (MCFT) and α-angle were significantly shorter. In a subgroup analysis, ROTEM®-D values for MCFT, α-angle, and maximum clot firmness were significantly shorter for patients with BMI ≥30 kg/m2 than those for patients with BMI

IELTS Academic Writing Task 2 Example and Answers 1. [From the passage and Task 2] Choose the one that best expresses the opinion of the student on the following issue: Students from poor background often need to study long hours before going home. Thus they often lack time to have fun and relax with their families. Some students make serious efforts by playing games on computers, or going to movies. However, they spend too much time on computers or in the cinema. Students should not sacrifice learning time for games or movies. They should learn as much as possible in school and make time for fun activities, such as reading, watching movies, or playing games, after school. (A) A good family is an important factor of a student's success in school. (B) Many students from poor background do not have computers at home. (C) Learning in the classroom and going home are two different activities for most students. (D) There is no need to sacrifice learning for games or movies. (E) It is important for poor students to have good families. 2. [From the passage and Task 2] Write a letter to the editor. Be as specific as possible. Explain why you disagree with the author or agree with the author and include relevant examples from the passage. (A) I believe that many students cannot achieve a successful result in schools. So they need to find more spare time to make them happy. So I hope government and other organizations to give more spare time to students. (B) I cannot accept the writer's opinion because I disagree with it. First, I think some people use learning too much. Some students play games and watch movies during learning time. I think they need to learn and have fun at the same time, which is important for a student's success in school. (C) I agree with the writer and I am sure many students need more spare time. Learning only depends on us and we should make time to learn. Most students cannot study enough in school. I think they need to make full use of spare time, such as reading books, watching TV and playing games. (D) In my opinion, the writer's idea is nonsense. I think students should know that learning and having fun are different things. Students should study and learn as much as possible, but they also should have some spare time to make them happy. They should study as much as they can
