You can also use paths to work with masks, shapes, and other elements. A rectangle tool is used to draw straight lines. It can either be dragged around the page or be included as part of the Line Tool. If you create a rectangle, you can change its size. Use the eyedropper tool to select specific areas of an image and include them in a new layer. This is useful for copying small sections of an image for many different effects. You can also add new colors or shades to an image by using an eyedropper to select areas. The Magic Wand tool is useful when you need to select only a certain area of an image. It works on the principle of color and is a simple way to select images without the need for a huge selection. The Pen Tool is a brush-like tool that can be used to draw. The Lasso tool can be used to define a specific area of the image as a path, perfect for creating bevels, shapes, and borders. You can click and drag within an image to get a circular selection. You can easily edit the selection by simply dragging it away from the edge of the image. You can edit an image in the Levels palette. You can use the eyedropper tool to select specific areas of an image and then adjust the levels of the image. This can help remove or add detail to the image. You can also use the Gradient tool to smooth out the color in images. This is useful for softening images or creating more natural transitions.
