31orecycled" paper. I'm a die-hard anti-recycling fanatic. When I was a grad student I found a cheap recycling bin to buy at the library. It's usually because old packaging is just too delicate and so it was wizened and brittle to touch. Ah, I see! Though, I must say, for the most part I am also on the other side of things - practically everything I throw in the trash can makes it's way to the recycling bin, though there have been times that I've tossed things directly into the recycling bin to be recycled or recycled myself, as the case may be. Though, I must say, for the most part I am also on the other side of things - practically everything I throw in the trash can makes it's way to the recycling bin, though there have been times that I've tossed things directly into the recycling bin to be recycled or recycled myself, as the case may be. Hiya, Not too concerned about that. It takes a lot of effort to make my city an environment. The vast majority of what comes in is recycled. But I still throw it all out when the local stores change their minds about what they want you to recycle. Part of the reason I have not purchased more than one DVD at a time is that I don't have the space for one in my apartment. And it seems ridiculous to buy films on multiple DVDs when they are typically only one hour long and once they are watched they are gone. The second reason is that I give the DVD away to a friend. The third reason is that I have always been skeptical about the idea of bundling a certain movie with each copy of a magazine or book. How is it possible to fit a film like Inception into a book? The fourth reason is that I am pretty much a bargain hunter by nature. I want to save as much money as possible and I get a kick out of having a bargain. I recycle almost everything I throw away in life and I try to buy second hand. I'm still a little wary of second hand stuff until I know more about it. For example, my wife bought a bike last year and it was complete
