Q: How to return a variable from dart function with await I'm a bit new to async/await in dart. I would like to return an object from a function where the object will be created as a Future. Here is what I currently have: class MyClass{ MyClass() { //This is asynchronously waiting for something _getSomeData() async { try { //Something async return _data; } catch(exception){ //Error handling return null; } } } Future getData(){ return _getData(); } } Can I just add async to the getData() function and return _data? I don't want it to run outside of the class. A: I would like to return an object from a function where the object will be created as a Future. Indeed, a Future represents a value (i.e. a result) that has not yet been calculated. If your getData function is to return a future, then the value can be whatever you like (really).
