Hello everyone! I have help from my amazing boyfriend's mom and my roommate since I've been studying so hard (and with the help of some great AP study guides!) and I'm just trying to make my success a reality. I just need to know if I have the right stuff. This isn't going to be easy for me. I'm currently an AP Chemistry student. But here's the thing, I've been paying attention. So far I have a passing score on all of the multiple choice questions on the AP. All of the AP. But I am using the papers prepared by the AP . I don't have access to the actual exam. I just do have the Ultimate Review Packet. My roommate was telling me that to make the difference between a C and an F I should just focus on the problem. 11/19/2015 4:36 AM Hello everyone! The 4,000 claims fell to 1,815,000, which was the lowest level since June 15, 2001. This was expected because the number of people continuing on jobless benefits fell to 4,826,000. Another interesting aspect of the report is that the Continuing Claims are off nearly 70% from a peak reading in February of 8,097,000 just before the shutdown of the U.S. government. The numbers are still higher than in early-May, just before the shutdown, but the sharp decline has the economists wondering whether the rebound will stick. "It is too early to conclude that recovery is in sight," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. "The unemployment rate is close to full employment, but the labor force is shrinking." So where is this shutdown going? The National Bureau of Economic Research, in a decision that was released on Tuesday said that the economic shutdown will stretch into July and August. At first, it was expected that both the House and the Senate would quickly pass a continuing resolution by June 8, which would prevent another shutdown.
