The assessment of “HyperMotion” in FIFA 22 gameplay begins with a rigid CPU opponent facing the player, and the AI must behave and play exactly as a human would. Players can then move to a “live-player” setting, which is using the actual player from the game, and the game will be simulated with “hyper-accurate” animation. This allows the game to be tested with player-specific animations, such as tackling styles and movement on the ball. Additionally, a “visual-only” setting is available, which will only enable the player’s graphics, animations, clothing and player appearance without any performance captures. In the lead-up to release, we conducted the following research with the team in order to discover more about each mode, and player. Live Player: What is the performance impact when using real players? In order to test performance with EA Sports’ real-life player, we recorded a full game with a CPU opponent using the “visual-only” setting. The CPU opponent had all animations and game logic running, allowing us to see the framerate of the real-life player with minimal interference. The CPU opponent was then manually swapped with the “live player” to see the performance impact of using the actual player in the game. Global Ranks The results of this research may surprise you. The live player level gives the same or better framerates than the CPU in numerous scenarios. The major conclusion is that the use of the real-life player has a negligible performance impact on both CPU and live player setups. This is an area where the developers were able to make really subtle changes to make the player react to the environment around it. The player has a more natural sense of what is going on around it, which is a feeling of realism that we are all familiar with. AI Tackling Next, the team conducted two studies to look at the effects of using the live player on AI control. These were conducted using both different variations of CPU opponents and using the live-player system as a control. The first AI study focused on replays for attacking situations – making a run into the penalty area. Players pass the ball into the middle of the pitch, before breaking into the box. The CPU opponent was unable to control the pace of the attacking play, allowing the team to record the impact on

- FIFA 22 introduces “HyperMotion Technology,” which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay.
- FIFA 22 introduces “Forward Passing” – a new feature that drastically alters the entire goalkeeping experience. In many ways, goalkeeper movement has been a major point of central debate amongst fans, critics, and players over the years. Now in FIFA 22, set ups now require a backing defender, which means that the pass forwards to a goalkeeper from a midfield and centre-backs will now put you at a disadvantage. As a result, changing your opinion of your keeper is more complicated and more rewarding. While those of us at EA SPORTS™ are always striving to perfect the goalie experience, we remain committed to always offering new and exciting ways to challenge veteran goalkeepers and remain excited when a new challenge is presented to us by our community.
- FIFA 22 introduces “Multi-board Game Modes.” in FIFA Ultimate Team Challenge Modes, you will be able to compete head to head against players on a keyboard and mouse. Compete on your PC or tablet, or connect wirelessly to your mobile device. Take part in 21 classic FUT tournaments and 13 FIFA tournaments.
