Indocyanine green angiography of the choroid in acute lymphoblastic leukemia and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. To evaluate the choroidal involvement in acute lymphoblastic leukemia and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, fluorescein angiography and indocyanine green angiography were performed in 12 patients with acute lymphoblastic leukemia and in 14 patients with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. These two imaging methods demonstrated choroidal alterations in all 12 patients with acute lymphoblastic leukemia and in five (36.4%) of the 14 patients with non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. Although the fluorescein angiography of leukemic infiltration is not apparent, indocyanine green angiography demonstrates small foci of choroidal infiltration characteristic of leukemic cell.1. Field of the Invention This invention generally relates to a motorcycle, and, in particular, to an arrangement for mounting components on the engine of a motorcycle. More specifically, the present invention relates to an arrangement for mounting various electrical components on the exhaust side of an engine of a motorcycle. 2. Description of the Related Art Conventional two-stroke, "gasoline" engine, motorcycles have an exhaust gas recirculation system (EGR system) which recirculates a portion of the exhaust gases into the induction system. An EGR system is often referred to as a "compensator" or a "system". However, the EGR system is simply a mechanism which recirculates exhaust gas. More specifically, the exhaust gas recirculation system is an additional exhaust gas exhaust system which allows a portion of exhaust gases to be recirculated. An EGR system may or may not have an associated compressor. Typically, an EGR system has an air filter which is located upstream of the EGR system. The air filter is located upstream of the EGR system because any particulate matter which passes from the engine to the exhaust side before the air filter would probably clog the air filter. The exhaust side or exhaust gas side of the EGR system is the side which is located on the exhaust side of the engine. The EGR system has a gas outlet which is located upstream of the air filter. The air filter is connected to a transition tube which extends from the air filter to a manifold which is located downstream of the engine. The transition tube is secured to an inlet manifold which is located
