Intellectual Property JAMS has a proven track record as the leading law firm for Intellectual Property and Intellectual Property Litigation. JAMS has successfully represented clients in the areas of patents, trademarks, copyrights, software, industrial designs, trade secrets, and unfair competition. JAMS also has extensive experience defending defendants in intellectual property litigation, including product liability and breach of contract. Other issues such as unfair competition or misappropriation of trade secrets often arise when a company sells their product overseas and then discovers that a competitor has been reverse engineering the product in order to produce a new product that is exactly like the product that was purchased. JAMS has successfully resolved complex cases ranging from patent infringement to a patent troll. When faced with an infringement action or patent troll lawsuit, clients can feel alone, stressed, and uncertain about the outcome of their case. When you retain JAMS, our skilled legal team will explore each case with you, analyze its risks, and advise you on your best legal strategy. How to Reduce Your Legal Costs JAMS provides clients with innovative strategies that ultimately reduce their legal costs. Our core business is providing clients with the best legal solutions at a reasonable cost. The JAMS Law Book Program is one of the most cost-effective ways to reduce your legal fees. JAMS offers a nationwide law firm directory and state-by-state law directory to identify the leading firms in your area with a focus on practicing areas of law to which you are a known expert. By using this directory to direct your legal needs, you can potentially save a significant amount of your legal fees. Furthermore, JAMS uses their expertise and experience in personal injury and long-term disability cases to develop comprehensive, customized, and dynamic settlements. JAMS's comprehensive casework and expert legal strategy has proven successful in decreasing

ABSTRACT The present application focuses on the segmentation of the parietal operculum (PO) and planum temporale (PT) for the evaluation of the language- related functions in magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) data. In order to identify the regions that are implicated in the language function, we have created a multi-modal atlas of the PO/PT and have performed a careful evaluation of the segmentation accuracy as obtained from different anatomical, histological and functional MR images. This atlas and the automated segmentation procedure are now publicly available. We also propose a novel methodological approach for evaluating the performance of automated segmentation procedures. To this end, we have developed algorithms that work on the raw data and that quantify the validity of the segmentations themselves, i.e., the consistency of the single segmented areas within the brain structures as well as across subjects. More specifically, we have introduced a novel t-test statistical analysis for comparing in-house developed fully automated segmentation algorithms (FAS) against manually generated labels. The proposed methodology is based on the application of automated segmentation algorithms on real fMRI data. The results of the statistical analysis will be presented using the fully automated segmentations (FAS) from the present atlas as the ground truth for comparison. The developed statistical analysis is well-suited for the evaluation of the performance of automated segmentation algorithms and is able to overcome some of the current limitations of the evaluation of automated segmentation algorithms. The new automated evaluation metrics will be applied to the large atlas dataset of atlases of the PO/PT, as generated in the present atlas, to allow for the identification of processing-related discrepancies in the automated segmentations, as well as to the study of the spatial correlation between the PO/PT and other brain areas. To demonstrate the potential of this methodology, we propose to evaluate segmentation algorithms on data acquired with three different MRI scanners and on brain tissues containing different processing artifacts. The datasets include high- and low-resolution T1, structural and functional fMRI data.Content Joining efforts Postgraduate research is a long-term commitment and you need your time to focus on your research. Joining a postgraduate group is one of the best ways for you to gain advice from your fellow students and postgraduate staff.
