It's to be a smooth departure this time. Secondly, at some point during the past few weeks, I have somehow become very aware of my surroundings. Of traffic lights. Of the sounds of hammering and nail-gunning. I don't know how this has happened, but it's occurred over the past two or three weeks. When I'm in the car, for instance, I suddenly wake up and realise I've been driving with my eyes on the road and my foot on the accelerator. No, no, no. This is not a warning, lest anyone should get the wrong idea. I'm not a self-diagnosed hypochondriac with the mental capacity of a horse. There is no need for anyone to worry. But the point I'm making is, the matter's been very relevant to my work. As a person who works from home, I've been sitting in my car, reading. Not usually difficult, but sometimes a book gets a little boring

Reply StaŽri: These bŽvbŠs, ${ }^{1} 1 / 4$, , a as well as other short vowel allophones are the new phonemes in the Corsican language and they are called iapallophones (sorry for french pronunciation, but I,Äôd rather like you to understand), they do not belong to the Italian phonemic system and, as everybody knows, are only used in Corsican writing. You might want to check this list: Reply Awesome read! It's like you wrote the book on it or something. Great choice of words as well, alot of information from this. Reply Joshua Lincecum - Surprise-Best-Seller A baseball best-seller. Well, there is no reason for its not to be. All the other books "champion his/her,". Even the best-seller list is mostly kind of "weird" when it comes to baseball. What is important is simply readers word of mouth, and it looks like readers are loving the book. Reply Don't waste the content!You know what you need to do.
