[Left atrial maze surgery. Report of four cases]. Four patients underwent mitral valve replacement for mitral regurgitation, using the "atrial maze" technique, first introduced by St.. Chantal of Paris in 1991. All patients had mitral valve endocarditis, and only one of them had isolated mitral insufficiency. The chordae from the posterior mitral leaflet were divided and stretched by a miniature stapler in 2-3 sections along their length. The mitral prosthesis was then inserted and the internal suture plicated. On patients follow up has been 2 months, 2 months, 3 months and 1 year. There was only one late death, after three months. One patient presents with recanalization of a part of the suture plicated the other patients have been asymptomatic with no echocardiographic signs of mitral valve regurgitation. The "atrial maze" technique is a good alternative in mitral valve replacement for endocarditis.
