---------- SavDisk Cracked Accounts is a small utility that can save files to a support, check or restore this save, compress files. With SavDisk Activation Code you can restore files by drag & drop from the explorer to the target. You can open the explorer on your backup through the butter "explorer". You can select another folder in destination than the usual used as source, by enter it or browse to it. By default the dropped files are copied in the same sub location of the destination than in the original one but you can uncheck the box recreate the tree to simply copy it at the root of the destination folder. The dropped file are restored whatever are the date or size attributes of the file, a more recent file can be overwritten. You can control the good operation in the console window. Known Bugs: Don't use the synchronization mode, it is bugged if it is stopped before the end of the operation SavDisk has a problem with the daylight change every six month. The NTFS file system under2000/NT/XP store the universal time of the file and give back the local time of the file. If you change your time zone, you can see that the file date will change. So the comparison with a FAT32 disk or a cdrom which doesn't change the date produce a difference. The daylight act as a time zone change of one hour. You can turn around the problem by selecting the option "ignore one hour difference " in the configuration with the risk that if you change a file exactly one hour after without any size modification it will not be saved.
