Paramount Looms Over Theaters Miramax, a $325 million-revenue production company, is seeking $70 million in financing to purchase and convert 50 theaters across the country. The historic theater conversion strategy, which involves a mix of film and television, follows Paramount's launch of Paramount Stages across the country. In May, STX Entertainment opened its first production-driven studio in the former Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, now-Sony, Taper building. The studio has also opened the production-driven studio in Elstree, England, and plans to go into production on its next film, the "MacGyver" feature, in the fall. STX Entertainment's film slate includes Paramount and STX's fall title, "Parker Posey: Somewhere... Somewhere," starring the comedian as she returns to the London stage for a sold-out run. It also recently announced the domestic release of STX's "Holiday Inn" on July 20, starring Vince Vaughn, Owen Wilson and Jennifer Aniston. Miramax's theatrical conversion strategy is the antithesis of the studio's much-ballyhooed television strategy. The program, "TV Land," will roll out in late 2004 with all-new programming on the channels of Universal Cable Productions
