this version works on windows 10, windows mobile 10 devices and windows phone 8.1 devices. it works by sending a request to the ccapi on the camera. a query is performed to determine the camera and the user should enter the port and ip of the camera being used. then, the camera is identified. then, the ccapi is activated on the camera, and the camera is queried to find out information about the camera. while canon mm operates directly with raw files, camera utilities operates with m2 raw files. and while camera utilities doesn't support flash, mm does support flash. and of course the mm doesn't work with flash cards. and mm operates with the microsd card of the camera. camera utilities doesn't. and in camera utilities you can make changes directly and without the need to download a file. and in mm you have to download a file. at this location is where you will find the ccapi sycall switch case 0x8000000000691840 in reference the the offset above it is for lv2 4.84 dex with ccapi 2.80 rev5. the offset changes on each console boot but it should be relatively easy to find by searching for one of the syscall commands like 0x977. the method used to block tmapi and ccapi is by returning 0 in getprocesslist function in the kernel. a recent option added allows to play all.m4a files on the device with no need to download them, simply by providing the device with a path to the mp3 files. this is accomplished by transferring the audio from the application. note: a video recording of the source audio file is made. if you want to download the resulting video file, either press "share/play" (default button) on the application to send the audio file to the ps3, or download it with ccapi.
